

The Coordinator's Corner
Mitch Hegman

September, 2009

By mid-month our related training for apprentices will be back in full swing. In addition to that, September will see the first of a fairly steady schedule of Journeyman CEU courses. Much of our summer was spent in the new labs building organizing existing labs and developing new ones. We intend to use the labs in CEU courses as well as in our ongoing apprenticeship training.

We are pleased to see that work has been fairly steady for most of the state. Though much smaller than in the last few years, we will be starting a new group of first year apprentices on the 14th of September. We wish them only the best in the new career they have chosen.

Most of the CEU classes that are being presented are either new or re-tooled. As has been stated before, we hope to see people in the classes who came because they wanted to...not because they are required. We appreciate any helpful suggestions regarding course ideas that you might be able to share with us.

See you soon.
